Big Not Necessarily Bad

The full magnitude of what Dunhill Development Corp. has planned for the outer region of Colwood along Latoria Road doesn't really sink in until you ponder the cost of the new community. As outlined to the Capital Regional District, it will consist of 7,200 units of housing. According to Howard Drummon, Colwood's representative on the regional board, the plan is to provide such housing at cost, which he estimates at about $45,000.

Multiply the two figures and you come up with a price tag of $324 million. To be sure, as Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell points out, the new development will take a long time to complete - he thinks 15 years at least. And the buldozers are not going to be on the site tomorrow morning, clearing the way for construction. Probably it will be a year at least, probably longer, before any work begins considering that three different levels of government will be involved - the regional district, the provincial housing department and the federal Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., which will be asked to provide much of the financing.

Dunhill's Burke Mountain community in the Lower Mainland, which was announced in March last year, is still only in the early planning stages. Environmental impact studies have yet to be completed. And it was only one-third the size of the Colwood project, just 2,000 units for an estimated 7,000 people, three-fourths of the units single-family housing, estimated at $100 million in all.

Public attitudes towards these types of super-projects seem to be hostile. The Burke Mountain plan has run into a good deal of opposition from residents in the Coquitlam area. Before that, then housing minister Lorne Nicolson raised the ire of most Vancouverites in 1973 by proposing a development for 20,000 people on the endowment lands of the University of B.C. That one became a dead letter - both NDP and Social Credit now are committed to preserving most of the UBC lands as park.

In Colwood, we can expect howls of outrage from those residents already there who don't want their pastoral lives disturbed by a huge influx of people. It's the large scale of these developments which seem to put people's backs up from the start. Logically, it shouldn't. That section of the region has been slated for expansion in the regional plan, and like it or not in the period of time Campbell is talking about - by 1990 — there will probably be 20,000 more people living in Colwood and Langford.

If not there, then someplace else in the capital region. We've seen the results of unplanned development with a comparable number of people moving into the Colwood - Langford area over a similar period of time, and the results aren't very pretty.

This type of planning is new to this part of the world, but other countries have shown it can work. Some of the new towns of the United Kingdom built since the end of the war, Holland's residential estates, the Scandinavian suburbs built in rural settings — especially Tapiola in Finland, one of the best examples of what good planning can produce - show Canadians needn't fear the results of central planning of housing developments. It can provide quality accommodation in good surroundings at affordable prices.

Let's hope Dunhill can deliver.

Business Oriented

For many years the Social Credit party was known as the "funny money"

Their actions re ICBC are not funny but their figuring surely is. The increase of 140 per cent should bring in about the missing $65 million ($230 million less $165 million taken in 1975). The incredible thing is that the potential for '76 is given as $390 million, but they admit that so many will be forced to cut coverage to the point where the expected revenue is only $230 million so that they are dropping $160 million in revenue plus depriving many people of a car at all, many more of a decent meal, a windfall for the lawyers and adjusters, assuring that many improperly repaired cars will be on the roads, depriving the good young driver, of which there are many, and generally creating havoc.

Making Parliament Effective

OTTAWA - Prime Minister Trudeau has long been critical of parliament and the way it works. The more important of his own statements tend to be made outside that forum, often directly to the Canadian people by radio and television.

That is the way in which he an nounced the great policy shift of Oct. 13 when he abandoned his government's previous opposition to price and income ure and adopted them. His defences of the policy that followed that reversal of course have all been made outside.

In one of his year-end broadcasts, reminded of this, Trudeau replied that it "perhaps a sad reflection on the House of Commons

"It is becoming less and less relevant," he told an interviewer, but he also continued and declared that "I think you can make parliament more effective as you can make other things more ef-

Parliament met again this week after its Christmas recess and its current session, which began Sept. 30, 1974, will run on for a while yet. One ministerial estimate is that the current session is likely to last until June. This makes nonsense of the old beginning in the autumn and ending in the spring or early summer but it is probably far more a reflection of the way the current government organizes its parliamentary work than of anything inherent in the system.

What's Been Done?

It probably does not matter very much whether the old pattern is followed or whether the government arranges very long sessions lasting, with a variety of interruptions, upwards of two years. There have been 230 sittings of parliament in this session so far. About all that is lost by prolonging one session rather than interrupting it and starting a fresh one is the speech from the throne in which governments announce their forth-

The more important question is not how long the session lasts but what has been done during those 230 sitting days. Is it really true that the House of Commons is becoming less and less relevant as the prime minister says? In fact, during that period the House of Commons passed 79 pieces of government legislation, 16 private members' bills, conducted major debates on the speech from the throne and two budgets and advanced a few other bills to varying stages. Eleven bills have been introduced and await second reading, the stage which involves parliamentary approval in principle.

on 15 different matters and have under consideration 10 more.

Few people would argue that the procedures of parliament are perfect but the first question to be asked is: What do we want parliament to do? In the first place, do we really wish to have or need a larger volume of legislation? That is see the country governed, how much of its life and affairs we want to see regulated, guided or controlled by legislation passed in Ottawa, bearing in mind that there is a considerable flow of regulations coming steadily from the other levels of government.

It seems to me dubious in the extreme that there is any need for a system which could pass more than 95 pieces of legislation in 230 days as well volume of committee work and a certain scrutiny of spending, imperfect as the protection for the citizen in the fact that a hyperactive government's activities before long, clog the legislativ machine. That result will compel an administration without priorities to establish some, to pick and choose among the things that it wishes to do.

Indeed, it can be argued that the most important factor in parlfamentary reform would have nothing to do with the rules and procedures of the House of Commons. The vital first step would be a more rational ordering of government priorities, a more careful selection leading ultimately to further legislation and control of some further aspect of national life. The second would be more careful construction of government legislation and particularly better drafting so as to reduce the time lost in future sessions correcting mistakes.

Trudeau's special parliamentary bete noir is the length of time spent on second reading debates. This is the stage at which legislation is approved in principle with careful attention to its details and final approval still to come. The British parliament limits debate at this stage in this direction, however, should be accompanied by some skeptical thought about the uses to which the time saved would then be put. If it were merely to clear the decks for still more legislation the project is not worth a half hour of a serious man's time. Some element of legislative bottleneck is essential to enforce priorities on governments.

Tougher Opposition

Ideally, the time saved by changes in the rules should be devoted to an effective improvement in parliamentary scrutiny of spending. Unfortunately, that is to achieve. The volume of spending is large and complex. The emptation of members to fall back on generalized speeches rather than to launch probing questions is great, although the performance of committees dealing with estimates is probably better than is often recognized. One sign of this is that ministers often feel that they have been well-examined when they member of the present government, that the national accounts should be thoroughly debated in the House of Commons. Some of the special debates which the present speaker has allowed more freely than his predecessor have had real value because they have generally been timely. This sort of debate should have claim on any time saved by changes in the rules. The present parliament has suffered from a weak opposition. Stanfield's decision to retire weakened him as a parliamentary figure and the New Democrats' loss of David Lewis was a major blow. The present NDP leader, Ed Broadbent, lacks Lewis' fire and so far has not yet earned the tenaciousness that is vital to good parliamentary opposition. The Conservative leadership campaign may, later in this parliament, produce an ability to challenge the government. An improved, tougher opposition would be a far greater step towards parliamentary reform than any changes in the rules. that they stay in office. Hopefully the

Cambodian Reds Bad Credit Risks

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand — The Cambodian Com-

Polite Smiles of Contempt

New York to Washington these days with a genuine sense of humility. This is rare in Washington—4 genuine sense of humility. All politicians here are humble, of course, and seldom let you forget it. They go around the country boasting about their humility. They are proud of their humility. Many are downright arrogant about their humility and insist that it qualifies them to be

There is nothing bogus about the New Yorker's sense of humility, however. If he has any sense at all of the way the world is turning, he knows in his marrow now that in Washington he is just another hick in the big town. New York may still joke with sour mirth about being the big apple, but compared to Washington, it is strictly Egg Harbor. New Jersey. Harbor, New Jersey.

The big town these days is right here. This is where the big men who hold all the trumps and five aces in every hand do things bigger than any other city on earth, and most of New York's boasts seem as trivial as mosquito tracks compared to Washington's.

A New Yorker boasting about his city's famous reputation for squandering money sounds like a country boy boasting about the size of the country courthouse. First night in town, at a party, a guest politely asked how much money New York was in the red as a search of its motorous fiscal irresponse. result of its notorious fiscal irresponsibility,

'Something like $3 or $4 billion," I said.

Washingtonians are always polite; when you are No. 1 you can afford to be-flickerted around the room. A Pentagon colonel enlightened me.

"Three or four billion," he mused.
"Is that what you call money?" At the Pentagon, he said, they had just finished throwing away more money that that—$5 billion, in fact—on a single project. It was the anti-ballistic missile, which was absolutely essential in 1970 before the Pentagon realized it was a waste of money.

By that time they had wasted $5

You knew New York was in over its head. Men looked at this colonel with admiration, and women, with barely concealed passion. One imagined him at gatherings like these sidling up to the most voluptuous woman in the room, and murmuring, "Would you like to come to my apartment and see the latest cost overruns on the C5A?"

The C5A is an airplane, not even as big as the World Trade Centre, on which the Pentagon periodically squanders several hundred million unbudgeted dollars because the builder, the Lockheed Corp. can't seem to get it quite right. At latest count, this one airplane was in the red to the tune of some $3 hillion, which is almost as much money as the entire city of New York managed to go broke for on a city-of city the Illion recole. of eight million people.

In Washington, where these things are done with style, they're $70 billion in the red for this year alone, and are talking about shooting for another $45 billion next year. This probably means they will go $90 billion in the red next year since Washington with the modesty becoming to its greatness, avoids boasting about what it can do and customarily promises only half as much deficit as it actually hopes to bring off.

New Yorkers have to be careful

New Yorkers have to be careful about talking money here. In New York, it seems big news that people have just been sandbagged with $300 million in nex taxes. In Washington, it would be a fatal social error to mention a sum so trifling at the dinner table. It creates embarrassed silences and infucreates embarrassed silences and infu-

No need here to dwell on Washington's primacy in crime. That has been too well expounded. New York's decline too well expounded, new York's decline is very simply summed up in the fact that while New York may still harbor the mafia, Washington hires it.

A more poignant illustration of New York's relegation to the small-potato towns is the ease with which the Rockefellers were bounced when they tried to fellers were bounced when they tried to crack Washington society. In New York, Rockefellers are somebody. At times it seems they are everybody. In Washington they are snubbed by men like Bo Calloway.

VANCOUVER (CP) - Cabivancouver (CP) — Cabi-net's decision to drop compul-sory collision coverage for new cars under Autoplan '76 has increased the cost for those who voluntarily buy this protection, Norman Bortnick, Insurance Corp. of British Co-lumbia general manager, said Wednesday.

Wednesday.

Last year 80 per cent of B.C. motorists had compulsory coverage either because it was required by law on all cars up to nine years old or because it was their personal choice. This year motorists will be required by law to carry only public liability carry only public liability with a $50,000 limit and accident benefits.

Bortnick said that there were three reasons why vol-untary collision and comprehensive insurance costs more than compulsory coverage:

(1) While agents will get five per cent commission on compulsory coverage in 1976, they will be paid 10 per cent on voluntary, leaving less out of the premium dollar to go to

(2) The more people over whom a risk is spread, the less the price. With a small group the risk is greater and premiums consequently are

(3) Premiums must be increased to cover the possibili-ty that it is the people most likely to have a claim who will take the voluntary cover-

Bortrick said that motorists financing their cars are forced by lenders to take collision and comprehensive coverage and that others choose to take it because of the protection it offers.

Good Year Forecast In Plastic Industry

TORONTO (CP) - The annual survey of the Society of the Plastics Industry of Canada shows most supplies and processors say they expect an increase in sales and after-tax profits this year instead of the decrease experienced by many in the industry in 1975.

Fifty-five per cent of the processors surveyed said they expect their dollar sales to rise by more than 10 per cent and 27 per cent said they expect increases of three to 10 per cent.

A sales increase of 10 per cent or more was expected by 76 per cent of the suppliers surveyed and 24 per cent said increases might be between three and 10 per cent.

In 1975, dollar sales dropped of flax, 317,000 at least three per cent for 54 and nil of corn. 70 per cent of the suppliers.

Sixty-eight per cent of the processors and 41 per cent of the suppliers said they expect increases of three per cent or

Profits on par with those in 1975 were expected by 18 per cent for the processors and 47

Most companies said they expected price increases to be within the range of three to 10 ref. cent.

Four per cent of the processors and six per cent of the suppliers said they were looking for price increases of more than 10 per cent.

Trio of Musical Treats on Tap Next Month in UVic Musicales

Three musical treats are coming up next month at the UVic music department and, as usual the public is more than welcome to attend.

UVic's first concerto program ever will feature four of its top music students in a performance Feb. 6 at 8 p.m. in MacLaurin 144.

performance Feb. 6 at 8 p.m. in MacLaurin 144.

At the same place, at 2:30 p.m. on Feb. 8, another in the series of "Sunday afternoon" faculty chamber recitals will take place, followed the next day at 8 p.m. by a performance of the Pacific Wind Quintet.

With the backing of the 40-m e m b e r UVie Chamber Orchestra under conductor George Corwin, the concerto will highlight the talents of Sandra Pumfrey, 20, oboe; Jacqueline Spring, 22, French horn; Rolf Glistein, 20, cello; and May-Ling Kwok, 25, piano.

Corwin said that schools of music all over the world tend to show off their best students

Watch Out, Bigfoot

PORTLAND (UPI) — Okay, Sasquatch; your days in hid-ing are numbered. The com-puter is after you.

Ron Olson, executive director of North American Wildlife Research, a Eugene-based organization devoted to hunting the legendary bigfoot, said a nine-man team using computerized information and electronic detection gear will go Sasquatch hunting in British Columbia in April or May.

Object of the expedition is object of the expedition is "to discover, once and for all, the sub-human creature who has left his giant footprints as enduring proof of his existence and raised unanswered questions in the mind of modern, scientific man." he said.

The searchers will carry The searchers will carry tranquilizer guns. Olson said plans call for tranquilizing a bigfoot, transporting it to a remote location and doing a number of studies on it.

Then a transistor tracker will be implanted in the creature and it will be returned to the place where it was captured.

Midfielder Brian Robinson and striker Bob Bolitho, who helped London Boxing Club of the Vancouver Island Soccer League's premier division to the Canadian title in 1975, will have a tough choice to make within the next week.

The choice is whether to continue with Canada's Olympic im or to join the professional Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League. They have only a week in which to sign a letter of intent to play with the Olympic side in Montreal during July.

Robinson, at 27 the oldest member of the national side currently training in Vancouver, has played 21 full interna-tionals since joining the team in 1971.

Winter Chinook Fishing Off Nearly Everywhere

Winter chinook fishing seems to have dropped off a little since the weekend in most Vancouver Island waters.

One of the exceptions to this generalization is the Victoria waterfront, where action has picked up since last week between Clover Point and Brotchie Ledge. Chinooks from five to 23 pounds have been landed by trolling strip, minnows and anchovies close to the bottom. Action has slowed in Pedder Bay but Dick Clapman still managed to boat a 15½-pounder near the navy jetty Tuesday while winding in his line and Brian Waddell, who has been going out just about every day, has been using anchovies to catch two or three chinooks per trip from five to seven pounds.

The pattern has gone like this at Becher Bay: Sunday (39 boats, 49 salmon to 19 pounds), Monday (six boats, 17 salmon to 9½ pounds), Tuesday (two boats, four salmon to 18 pounds) and Wednesday (12 boats, 23 salmon to 14 pounds.)

While those catches can't exactly be termed bad, it was a lot better a couple of weeks ago. Most of the catches have been made on 80 to 100 feet of line, two pounds of weight and strip anchoving or spoons.

Best spots have been Bedford Island, Aldridge Point and Beechey Head.

Sooke returns slackened off Sunday with only the odd seven or eight-pounder now coming in from the Bluffs in Sooke Bay, off Possession Point or on the outside of Secre-

George Moore topped all fishermen this week with a 28-pounder landed on an anchovy just off Fiddle Reef near Oak Bay. Other good catches have been coming in from Trial Island on deep lines.

Returns are holding level off Deep Cove with four to sixpounders grabbing deep lines rigged with strip or hootchies off Wain Rock and in Satellite Channel.

Blues and jacks form the main catch in the middle part of Saanich Inlet with best spots being Willis Point, The Boulder, The Wall, Coles Bay and Senanus Island.

Jack James topped a rather spotty return in Finlayson Arm this week with an 18½-pounder taken Wednesday on light tackle and a small hootchie in front of Goldstream Island.

Further up-Island, some good catches of blues, jacks, herring and grey cod have been made in Sansum Narrows while moochers are boating winter chinooks to 25 pounds off

Some fishermen, jigging herring with a number-12 treble hook off the Cowichan Bay wharf and then casting the bait further out to swim around, have been connecting with good catches of chinooks.

Blues by the thousands are swarming off Nanaimo between the Fingers and Departure Bay. Quite a few are now "keepers" and will form a good coho fishery this fall when they've grown bigger.

A few chinooks to seven pounds are still being taken off Northwest Bay and Harmac.

Strip is the favored bait to land chinooks to 14 pounds around Holford and Rainy bays at the mouth of the Alberni Inlet and some large chinooks (nearing 30 pounds) are reported around Union Bay and Little River.

Campbell River waters have also slowed down as far as chinook fishing is concerned.

Baby Girl Must Go to Jail

LONDON — A two-month-old baby girl is to spend one year in prison with her mother who was convicted here today of stealing three dresses worth $400. Mrs. Maureen Toomey, 31, stole the dresses only one week after being given a one-year suspended sentence for receiving stolen goods. The magistrate said, "It distresses me to have to send to prison a woman who has a two-month-old baby, but I don't see how the court can deal with you in any other way."

High Blood Pressure Runs in Families?

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) High blood pressure, a major killer disease, tends to run in families and there are indications the tendency can begin soon after birth, Harvard Uniresearchers have group of children from birth through their first years, seeking to learn what establishes family trends in blood pressure, Dr. Edward Kass said Tuesday.

He and associates hope to "find leads into the earliest time when the child enters a blood pressure track that seems destined, on the whole, to operate for the remainder of the child's life."

Perhaps "the cause or causes of an initial rise in blood pressure can be discovered this way," and if the causes are something in the environment or life-style then they might be corrected or controlled, he told an Ameri-can Heart Association Science Writers Forum.

investigated is an enzyme or chemical controller called Kallikrein, Kass said. Adults and children, with elevated blood pressure have less of this enzyme than people with normal pressure. Kallikrein acts to dilate blood vessels, reducing resistance to blood flow. It can be detected in urine.

Some 24 million North Americans are believed to have elevated bloodpressure or hypertension. Most not aware of it because they have aware of it because they have ro apparent symptoms. Con-tinued high blood pressure damages blood vessels, in-creasing the risk of heart at-tacks, strokes and kidney damage. Drugs can often but not always bring the pressure under control.

Haute Couture Goes Casual

By BERNADINE MORRIS New York Times

NEW YORK — Somewhere around 1970, fashion itself began going out of fashion. And no wonden; look what was happlening. -The women's liberation movement, with its cons-ciousness-raising sessions and its claims for women's rights, was prodding women every-where to look beyond the nar-cissism of their own ward-robes and mirrors to a larger world outside. -Those who still paid attention to clothes decked themselves out in the most decrep-it blue jeans, fringed leather jackets and old piano shawls. It was known as the rich hip-pie look and it wasn't an inspiring sight.

—The fashion establishment itself was going through pro-

So the jeans regime continued practically unabated and women who considered themselves past the jeans stage solaced themselves with found and mind-boggling changes. Hardly anybody could keep up.

After hemlines had reached the highest possible level in history toward the end of the 1960's, they plummeted a yard or so in 1970. Women who had cautiously been shortening their skirts an inch or so at a time were left with big investtime were left with big invest-ments in clothes and their knees hanging out. Declaring that the midi, as the long skirts began to be called, was aging, unattractive and un-settling, they boycotted it and sought refuge in pants.

The final blo was the emergence of short pants in the winter of 1971. Soon known everywhere as "hot pants" they were everybody's answer to long skirts. Rationalists point-ed to their practicality during warm weather — more practical even than miniskirts with their perils at the file cabinet — but even before spring, alas, they were gone.

CARACAS - As Prime Minister Trudeau and his party boarded the aircraft in Mex-ico City Monday to fly to Cuba, Kamloops-Cariboo MP Len Marchand came up behind one of the pilots and stuck his finger in the airman's back.

"Take this plane to Havana," he ordered.

Three days later as the aircraft took off from Havana Airport the press corps and some of the prime minister's staff let loose a cacophany of cheers and cries of "Viva cheers and cries of "Viva Venezuela" to express their relief at leaving behind them hours of frustrating delays, disrupted schedules, spartan accommodation and abuse

It seemed as though the Cubans deliberately exposed the newsmen accompanying the prime minister to some of the sacrifices which the peo-ple of the country have made

Hanging Bill An Issue For Tories?

OTTAWA (CP) - A bill to abolish capital punishment will probably be introduced in Parliament Feb. 9, just in time to become an issue at the Conservative leadership convention which begins 10 days later.

The timing is coincidental but important. The govern-ment had hoped to introduce the bill before Christmas but kept'running into problems.

It will give convention delegates and the country a chance to get a clear statement from the 11 official candidates on how they feel about the emotional issue.

The party votes have split on modifying the law in the last 10 years, but members have not been required to vote along party lines. They probably will be this time, making the issue more difficult for the next leader. ficult for the next leader.

John Diefenbaker and Robert Stanfield each have taken a position against capital punishment in previous de-bates but the 11 candidates Flora Macdonald, Flora Macdonald, Joe Clarke, James Gillies and Heward Graffety have taken abolitionist positions. Claude Wagner, Jack Horner, Sinclair Stevens and Pat Nowlan are retentionists in yarying degrees with Wagner taking the headest receiving the hardest position.

Paul Hellyer, perhaps look-ing at the public opinion polls favoring hanging says he would call a national referen-dum on capital punishment.

Brian Mulroney and John Fraser have indicated that they would support an aboli-tion bill only if it is accom-panied by long prison sentences for murder

The government will on abolition is expected to include mandatory sentences for various degrees of murder. It will be accom-panied by tougher parole provisions for violent offenders, proposals for gun controls and other preventive measures.

Although the legislation will be introduced before the convention, it won't reach debate, barring hitches, until after the new leader is chosen.

Reneging Charged

OTTAWA (CP) - Health Minister Mac Laionce was rapped sharply Thursday by opposition MPs for trying to clamp a ceiling on the federal share of health care spending for the next two years without consulting the provinces.

Progressive Conservative and New Democratic MPs contended federal health auth-orities were reneging on the present 50-50 cost-sharing arrangement and shifting a greater portion of expenditures to the provinces.

The bill originally would have placed a limit on the increase of federal health spending for three years. Lalonde announced Wednesday the limit now will apply only for two years.

Mr. Leggatt had a suggestion for that too in his motion.

He said Health Minister

"And there are those, like me, who believe that big gov-ernment and big labor may be growing too heavy for free enterprise to carry," he said.

garden is one of the ever-green berberises. Its strong spines exclude its use on Rarely do we see these as hedge material yet if speed is not thought necessary. Berberis stenophylla or B. darwini makes a fine prickly informal boundary to eight feet if wanted.

Flowers are golden and rich orange respectively with B. darwinii the earlier, in April and May. The strip of soil the plants are to occupy must be well prepared and that is the job which may be possible now.

Mark out the strip three feet wide. Be sure it is far enough back from the property line not to interfere with neighbors or municipal prop-deeply to break up hardpan below and mixing with rough compost; leafmould, very old manure and topsoil will fill in for receiving the plant roots.

Distance apart in the row

A nurseryman will guide you on this when choosing. The depth to plant is indicated by the soil line on the stems. Newly-planted, the hedge needs firming in the soil after each frost the first year. Early in spring, watering will be necessary on a regular basis and be continued throughout the summer.

Cultivation of the soil surface after watering is useful in disturbing weed seedlings that love to thrive at the base of hedges and in later sum-mers hoeing after watering reduces the need for frequent applications.

The humus incorporated in the soil before planting holds moisture down below where it is needed.

Pruning in the first thre years will set the growth pat-tern for the berberises. In later years their arching branches are readily con-trolled by thinning.

Hedges need thoughtful choosing. They can be beautiful as well as useful.

Rescued Should Pay: City

Irresponsible boaters who get into trouble at sea through their own negligence and failure to observe regulations should be made to pay for the air-sea rescue services involved, Victoria city council has

A motion passed by council Thursday urges the ministers of transport and national defence to introduce a "financial assessment" on the individuals who cause such emergency situations.

The lengthy resolution, embracing proposals for improvements to air-sea rescue services and a general strengthening of regulations, was drafted by Ald. Alf Hood, who has frequently complained about the "damn fools" responsible for costly fools" responsible for costly searches.

Hood could not be reached today to explain his billing proposal, but Ald. Bill Tindall said he doubts it would be said ne doubts it would be practical to charge the total cost of a rescue mission where negligence is involved. But "at least some transfer of cost" to those imposing an unnecessary burden on rescue services should be considered as a deterrent, Tindall suggested. The preamble to council's motion notes there is increasing use of boats and light air-to cope with more and more mishaps.

In their review of rescue facilities the federal ministries should include insistence on the installation of appropriate safety equipment and adher-ence to emergency proce-dures, it states.

In addition, an effective public relations program should be launched stressing the hazards which boaters and flyers pose to themselves and others; the precautions they must take; and the pen-alties they face by failure to

Ex-MASH Star Premieres New Crime-Drama Series

By VERNON SCOTT HOLLYWOOD (UPI) Wayne Rogers becomes one of the few series within a year when his new show, City of Angels, makes it debut Feb. 3.

Rogers, who co-starred with Alan Alda as Trapper Jöhn in M-A-S-H, quit the popular show at the end of last season in a dispute over scripts.

The rangy, curly haired Rogers is not content to play second banana. Alda was getting the lion's share of the M-A-S-H action.

In the new series Rogers will play Jake Axminster, a Los Angeles private eye circa 1934 when gambling was wide open and some of the cops corrupt.

Rogers, a native Alabamian and a Princeton graduate, will have no costars this time. M-AS-H, with its large cast, put little pressure on him. City of Angels will succeed or fail on his personal appeal.

his personal appeal.

The added responsibility is fine with Rogers but he knows everything depends on the scripts.

"We're in a big rush to get some stories ready in time," he said.

"They're trying something new. Our first show will be broken up into three separate episodes at weekly intervals. I on't know if it's a good idea.

"I've been working with the producers on the scripts and consulting them about casting and directors. It's a lot more work than M-A-S-H.

"But I have absolutely no all good friends and I miss see-

Eleanor and Franklin— Neither Fiction or Fact

(NYT) — The heavily publicized dramatic special "Eleanor and Franklin" was recently shown on ABC in two recently shown and his struggle with polio two-hour installments, with the producers already hinting at further installments to come, depending on public response. Its political results. "Eleanor of Franklin" invokes FDR's If that response is satisfactory, viewers can presumably look forward to "Further Adventures of Eleanor and Franklin," "Eleanor and Franklin," "Eleanor and Franklin and Missy and Harry" as well as other similar Bicentennial treats.

The hope that popular demand will warrant continuation of the dramatizations may explain a funyiber of things about the present package of programs that are otherwise and Franklin' invokes FDR's "greatness" only in order to stir up an unearned interest in his private life, which the dramatization otherwise does little to justify.

But even those who enter public life reluctantly, clinging to their privacy, soon find that the served as a consultant. It loses sight of Eleanor's development, however, in a tangle of other themes, each revolving around a stock figure of demential problems. domestic melodrama — the jealous mother-in-law, the pretty young rival, the dutiful helpmate. In reducing Eleanor to a loyal but long-suffering wife, the TV dramatization does violence to the complexity of her character. As Lash makes clear in his biography, a strain of es-ceticism or prudery com-pounded Eleanor's jealousy of pounced Eleanor's Jealousy of her-convivial mate. She dis-tructed the "playboy" in FDR and suspected his friends of playing up to this side of his character. Franklin's enjoy-ment of pleasure "pushed her in the opposite direction." Lash writes. Her disapproval, in turn, encouraged him to new extremes of offensiveness.

'If Father became friendly with a princess or secretary," their daughter Anna once told Lash, "he'd reach out and give a pat to her fanny and laugh like hell . . . whereas to Mother that was terrible."

The Roosevelt marriage, then, was no magnolia romance; yet, precisely because it exposed Eleanor's self-esteem to protracted assault, it appears to have provided much of the psychic energy that forced her outside the marriage into public life. Even as a "love story," as it is described in the promotional literature dis-tributed by ABC, "Eleanor and Franklin' remains unconvinc-riage seems to have been equally unsatisfactory in the long run. Not only did his wife's emotional demands make him uncomfortable but, like so many public men he "was really incapable," as Lash quotes Missy LeHand, herself one of FDR's favorites. "of a per-FDR's favorites, "of a personal friendship with anyone."

Roosevelt's life gives strong support to the view that certain emotional impoverishment is either a precondition or a consequence of public eminence. Men who find the demands of strong friendship too exacting easily develop a taste for public life, where personal of Rochester.)

mass media, Political "greatness" con-fers the same celebrity that other kinds of success confer on movie idols and sports heroes, instantly creating a revelations, domestic details and "human interest." Roosevelt himself helped to create this market with his skillful use of radio, his "fireside chats" and his "little dog Fala."

If millions idolized him during his lifetime, however, not only his attractively packaged personality but his policies evoked a sympathetic response. The most striking feature of ABC's Bicentennial special was the absence of any sense of those policies, which gave rise to such intense controversy at the time, inspiring hatred as well as devotion. "Eleanor and Franklin" at-tempts to revive the Roosevelt myth by draining it of political content. In the process, it also falsifies the Roosevelt's private life, minimizing the private cost of public eminence.

Such a transformation of public legend into a "poignant and compelling love story" il-, lustrates some of the central features of mass culture — the transformation of politicians into "personalities"; the blurr-ing of the distinction between Franklin' remains unconvincing, since the dramatization depicts a love story without pain, lasting conflict or irreconcilable differences.

on the creative process.

That can be debunked by pointing to television's un-impressive record for regular-ly scheduled creativity in non-family oriented viewing time. Meantime, in front of the television set, the children are watching a whole different set of programs.

Family viewing time takes in the two hours between 7 and 9 p.m. on the east and West coasts. In the middle of the country, where it occurs between 6 and 8 p.m., ap-parently children go to bed an hour earlier than elsewhere. It is an attempt at self-regulation by an industry not noted for gestapo tactics in enforcing its

The family time concept was adopted as part of the television code by the National Association of Broadcasters. Only 62 per cent of the nation's almost 700 stations subscribe to the code. The others are free the importance of this mining to air whatever their markets by Dr. Barcus:

The definition of family viewing is sufficiently vague to allow considerable latitude. For instance, sex is supposed to be a no-no, but on a recent Barney Miller (8 p.m.) epsidode, a suspect who looked like he might fall off his platform sheet and better later.

Television to study after school television on the nation's independent stations

After classifying more than 200 hours on 68 independent stations, Dr. Barcus found that 60 per cent of the so-called "children's shows" were originally produced for adults.

In that category were various situation comedies, in-cluding the unending I Love Lucy reruns, and the ubi-quitous Flintstones, originally a prime time cartoon show designed for adults.

Two thirds of the audience for these programs, Dr. Barcus said, were children in the 2-11 age group.

Narrowing the study down for closer scrutiny, Dr. Barcus viewed in depth 10 independent stations across the nation and found that 99.9 per cent of their after school programming was entertainment, "dominated by cartoon comedy, situation comedy, children's variety and crime-mystery drama." Less than one hour out of each 30 hours was locally originated(as opposed to recorded or syndicated material).

Popular Actress Stars In Bette Davis Classic

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Elizabeth Montgomery is the Grand Dame of television drama, starring in at least one top special every year. This week it is Dark Victory, a remake of the 1938 movie classic which starred Bette Davis who, in turn, took over from Tallulah Bankhead who played the dying heroine on Broadway.

Last year it was The Legend of Lizzie Bordon and the year before A Case of Rape. When a top dramatic show comes along the producers seek out Elizabeth who starred for years in Bewitched, a brittle

Emmy Winner Directs Play

Lee Grant's dramatic directing debut — Oliver Hailey's For the Use of the Hall — returns to Hollywood Television Theater, February 5 at 9:00 p.m. on Public TV 9. A comedy of manners in which the characters demonstrate that the differential between that the differential between reasonable expectations and reality is unhappiness, the play deals with love and marriage, success and failure.

Author Hailey felt particularly close to his subject matter: "I wanted to write a play about success and failure, particularly since I feel something of an authority on the latter, having written four plays which were flops when they first were produced!"

Bess, a mother in her 70's, acts as Charte for the alexages.

Bess, a mother in her 70's, acts as Chorus for the play, speaking as if she were in the future, looking back on 1975. She sees the problems of her son Martin, a failed playwright whom she expected to marry sophisticated socialite Charlotte.

In fact, Martin and Charlotte had once been lovers. But in 1975 Martin is married to Alice — a woman who is content — while bankrupt Charlotte lives with Allen. Disliking poverty, Charlotte is making plans for her and Allen to move in with Martin

All of the family problems come to a head when Martin's sister Terry arrives for a visit: she is a nun, undergoing a crisis of faith.

The cast features Aline Mac-Mahon as Bess, George Furth

as Martin, Barbara Barrie as Charlotte, David Hedison as Allen, Susan Anspach as Terry, and Joyce van Patten as Alice. Lee Grant, who recently hosted the critically acclaimed WHY ME? breast cancer documentary, has won Emmy Awards for her roles in Peyton Place and The Neon Ceiling. She gained directing ex-perience at the American Film Institute in their Women in Film Program, although she is convinced that her work as a teacher of acting was a tremendous help in becoming a director. For the Oliver Hailey play she worked in collabora-tion with technical director

Rich Bennewitz.

For the Use of the Hall is a production of Hollywood Television Theater, a presentation of KCET-Los Angeles. Its presentation on KCTS-9 is paid for in part by Members of Nine.
